

A large brown albatross is captured in mid-flight, its wings fully extended, soaring over a rocky coastline. The bird is the central focus, with its dark feathers and large, webbed feet clearly visible. The background features a blue sky with scattered white clouds, a dark blue sea, and rugged, light-colored rock formations. One prominent rock formation has a natural archway. The overall scene conveys a sense of freedom and travel.

Of course, not a single normal person would want to leave his warm and comfortable armchair just for no reason.

*Moreover, to come to a wild place
and live,*

... it's even difficult to explain where.

All to gain a doubtful joy of observing some kind of bird's baggie inflate at 4 o'clock in the morning,

*...a far-off desert bloom
with “bright colors”,...*

...or some exotic horrors fall asleep peacefully on the sand.

*No way. This phenomenon should have a rather scientific,
medical explanation.*

And here it is. All this – is an effect of a virus, which is called “wind of travels”.

It penetrates our house, if we ventilate it too often or communicate with those already sick.

This specific virus can add colours to a scary shark turning it into a cute fish,

...and imagine a building the size of a dog house, as beautiful, fairy-tale home.

So, if you suddenly want to travel somewhere, it means that this virus has come into you, and you need to get rid of it quickly.

There is a number of efficient treatment procedures. The most reliable remedy – to start watching TV, preferably starting with the news.

Then, a prolonged sitting at the computer helps a lot.

Going shopping isn't a bad idea either,

...or walking between the skyscrapers.

*Well, if all of these
is not near you,
some selfies photos
may be made as a preventive measure.*

In addition, not too seriously sick people, can feel the improvement next to various sculptures.

For example,
if someone has a strong craving
for fishes, a fish sculpture must be installed near his house,

For example,

to cure

*...and, if a craving for animals
—a sculpture of a cute animal.*

If the virus of travels is left untreated, it will progress and may develop into a dangerous form. Then the TV may suffer,

... as well as other attributes of civilization.

*The virus of travels is very contagious.
It may spread quickly to close relatives,*

*...or to some ordinary travelers
on the metro.*

However, the children are the most susceptible to it.

That is why it is very important to scare them off from the virus of travels in a timely and creative fashion.

And in general, the children must think more about business and career, and not be distracted by any kind of silly things.
